Can I print labels using an old dot-matrix printer?

Applies to

• Cataloging Label Program

Answer

Your printer may be able to print labels from the Cataloging Label program. Older dot-matrix printers have DIP switches, which control carriage return, line feed, and printer emulation. (See your printer manual for information on DIP switches.) The printer emulation must match the printer driver used by the Cataloging Label program. You may need to install additional printer driver(s) through the Add Printer Wizard. Select the printer driver from the Print Options window in the Cataloging Label Program.
